

Ting Li
Professor of Sociology
School of Social Science
Tsinghua University

Ting Li is currently a Professor of Sociology in the School of Social Science at Tsinghua University. She holds a bachelor degree in Probability and Statistics from Peking University, and a PhD in Quantitative Ecology and Resource Management from the University of Washington, Seattle. She was also a postdoctoral fellow at the Carolina Population Center at UNC, Chapel Hill. Her research interest lies in family and marriage, health and aging, and demographic transition in digital era. Her work has been published in PNAS, Demography, Social Forces, Journal of Marriage and Family, Population Studies, Social Science & Medicine, Social Science Research, among others.