Ethan Siu Leung Cheung is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Social Work and Social Administration at The University of Hong Kong. Grounded in a social work perspective, his interdisciplinary research examines how home and neighbourhood environments shape the well-being and quality of life of community-dwelling older adults, particularly those from marginalised groups. He is also committed to improving dementia care to better support people with dementia and their family caregivers. Drawing on a range of methodological approaches—including quantitative, qualitative, and intervention research—Ethan’s work aims to advance inclusive, age-friendly home and community environments that promote health, quality of life, and social participation among older adults and their caregivers.
