

Yongai Jin
Professor and Chair of Demography
Center for Population and Development Studies
Renmin University of China

Yongai Jin is Professor and Chair of the Department of Demography at the School of Population and Health and Deputy Director of the Center for Population and Development Studies at Renmin University of China. She was a Tung Global Scholar at Princeton University in 2018–2019. Her research focuses on marriage and family, social inequality, and aging in the digital society. She has published more than 40 articles in leading international and Chinese journals, including Demographic Research, Journal of Contemporary China, Studies in Family Planning, Population Research, Peking University Journal (Humanities and Social Sciences), and Population Journal. She currently leads a Key Project funded by the National Social Science Fund of China on fertility support policies in the context of low fertility in China, with a particular focus on the effectiveness of fertility support measures and their implications for early childhood development.