

Kristin Surak
Professor of Political Sociology
Department of Sociology
London School of Economics

Kristin Surak is a Professor of Political Sociology at the London School of Economics and the author of The Golden Passport: Global Mobility for Millionaires (Harvard University Press 2023).

She is a leading expert on elite mobility, international migration, nationalism, and Japanese politics, whose research has been translated into more than a dozen languages. She publishes in major academic journals and writes for popular outlets, including the London Review of Books, Washington Post, The Guardian, New Statesman, and Wall Street Journal. She also comments regularly for global sources, such as the BBC, New York Times, Washington Post, and news outlets in over 30 countries.

Kristin has held several internationally recognised positions, including Richard B. Fischer Member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, Fung Global Fellow at Princeton University, Sainsbury Fellow at the Sainsbury Institute for Japanese Arts and Cultures, and Max Weber Fellow at the European University Institute. She is a Lifetime Fellow of Clare Hall at the University of Cambridge and an Academic Peer of Hitotsubashi University, and has been a visiting professor at the Tokyo University of Foreign Studies and at New York University in Abu Dhabi.

The American Academy of Political and Social Science has recognised her scholarship, which has been funded by the German Science Foundation (DFG), Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC), Japan Foundation, Fulbright-Hays Foundation, and Leverhulme Foundation, among others. Kristin has also advised a number of governments and governmental bodies, including ones within the European Commission and European Parliament.