

Title:

When AI Improves Performance, What Happens to Learning?

Bio:

Dragan Gašević is Chair Professor of Learning Analytics and Artificial Intelligence in the Faculty of Education and the School of Computing and Data Science at the University of Hong Kong. His research focuses on data analytics, artificial intelligence, and design methods for advancing understanding of self-regulated and collaborative learning. He was previously Distinguished Professor of Learning Analytics and Founding Director of the Centre for Learning Analytics at Monash University, and held professorial positions at the University of Edinburgh and Athabasca University. He is a founder and former President of the Society for Learning Analytics Research and a founding Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Learning Analytics and Computers & Education: Artificial Intelligence. He is a Distinguished Member of the ACM and recipient of the Society for Learning Analytics Research Lifetime Member Award.